Written Transcript
Office for Victims of Crime

Female Narrator 1:

Trafficking is the severe exploitation of an individual through sexual exploitation or some sort of forced labor.

Male Narrator 1:

People are tricked or forced or abducted or threatened into situations against their will.

Female Narrator 2:

Victims can be anyone. They can be men, women, and children of any age, any nationality. They could even be a U.S. citizen.

Female Narrator 3:

Human trafficking is a very profitable industry, and it's one of the fastest growing crimes in the world.

Male Narrator 2:

You can only sell a kilo of coke once. With these victims, you can make money off of them again and again and again.

Male Narrator 3:

These are somebody's kids, somebody's parents, somebody's sisters or brothers who are being held in conditions that no American and no reasonable person in the world would find to be suitable.

Female Narrator 4:

As we all know, slavery has been outlawed for a very long time, but in fact this is modern day slavery.
