

Unit 9: Child Abuse and Neglect

What Is Child Abuse and Neglect?

There are four main types of child maltreatment: physical abuse, child neglect, sexual abuse, and emotional abuse. Although any form of child maltreatment may be found separately, they often occur in combination. Emotional abuse is almost always present when other forms are identified.

Significant stresses in the lives of parents or caretakers may increase the likelihood of child abuse and neglect. Problems may include social stressors (unemployment, poverty, divorce, death), health crises (family illness, alcohol and other drug abuse in the family), and mental health problems.

Physical abuse is causing physical injury to or otherwise harming a child. The parent or caretaker may not have intended to hurt the child; the injury may have resulted instead from excessive discipline or physical punishment.

Child neglect is failure to provide for a child's basic needs. Neglect can be divided into several types: physical neglect, medical neglect, inadequate supervision, emotional neglect, and educational neglect. For more information on types of neglect, visit Information Gateways' webpage on the Identification of Neglect at <https://www.childwelfare.gov/pubs/focus/acts>.

Sexual abuse includes fondling a child's genitals, intercourse, incest, rape, sodomy, exhibitionism, and commercial exploitation through prostitution or the production of pornographic materials. Many experts believe that child sexual abuse is the most underreported form of child maltreatment.

Emotional abuse (psychological, verbal, or mental) includes acts or omissions by parents or caregivers that have caused, or could cause, the symptoms listed below.

I did, but I didn't want to tell. I wanted to, but I didn't want to...I was thinking, if I told and he found out, I would be in trouble.

—Sam, 8

In some cases, the acts alone, without any harm evident in the child's behavior or condition, can warrant intervention by Child Protective Services (e.g., practices such as confining a child to a dark closet or a cage). Children who have been abused and/or neglected are harmed physically, behaviorally, and emotionally. For example—

- A neglected child may look undernourished and/or may have sleep disorders or untreated injuries. He or she may beg or steal food, have poor hygiene, or be involved in promiscuity, drugs, or delinquency. As a result, the child may have poor self-esteem, emotional issues, or social problems.
- A physically abused child may have questionable injuries such as bruises, welts, burns, fractures, cuts, or scrapes. As a consequence of the abuse, the child may be uncomfortable with physical contact, frightened of parents or other adults, afraid to go home, or act aggressively or withdrawn.
- Most physical indicators of child sexual abuse are identified through a doctor's examination. Behavior that may signal child sexual abuse includes inappropriate knowledge of sex, highly sexualized play, unexplained fear of a specific person or place, nightmares, or withdrawal. A sexually abused child may have low self-confidence, feel shame or guilt, or appear depressed or anxious.
- Behaviors that indicate emotional abuse include conduct disorders, extreme behaviors, cruelty, and delinquency. Often, an emotionally abused child will experience delays in development.

The consequences of child abuse and neglect can be serious and long term. Abused and neglected children may experience a lifelong pattern of depression, anxiety, low self-esteem, inappropriate or troubled relationships, or a lack of empathy.

In the News: Child Abuse and Neglect Trends

Reports of child abuse and neglect have quadrupled since the 1980s. Court schedules and social work caseloads are filled with instances of this crime. Take a look at the facts below. Which of these trends doesn't surprise you?

- Child abuse is reported, on average, every 10 seconds.⁵⁷
- Approximately 3 million cases of child abuse and neglect involving almost 5.5 million children are reported each year.⁵⁸
- The majority of cases reported to Child Protective Services involve neglect, followed by physical and sexual abuse.⁵⁹
- Among children who are abused, many suffer a combination of physical abuse, sexual abuse, and/or neglect.⁶⁰
- Girls are sexually abused more often than boys are.
- Boys have a greater risk of emotional neglect and serious injuries than girls have.
- Children of a parent who suffered childhood abuse or neglect are at greater risk for abuse and neglect.⁶¹
- Some studies have shown that neglect may be even more detrimental to a child's early brain development than physical or sexual abuse.⁶²
- An average of five children die every day from abuse or neglect in the United States.⁶³
- Children ages 4 and younger are the most frequent victims of child fatalities (70 percent).⁶⁴
- In 2016, parents—acting alone or with another parent or individual—were responsible for 78 percent of child abuse or neglect fatalities.⁶⁵
- Fathers and mothers' boyfriends are most often the perpetrators in abuse deaths; mothers are more often at fault in neglect fatalities.⁶⁶

Examples of Child Abuse and Neglect

As you read each example of child abuse and neglect crimes, consider the impact on victims.

Neglect

Failure to provide for a child's basic needs.

Maria's teachers notice that she looks undernourished and is usually hungry when she arrives at school. She has been found sleeping in class and stealing food from the other children's lunch boxes.

*...frightened, very frightened...
trust me, it's very, very scary.*

—Tom, 11

What may Maria think and feel because she is neglected?

Physical Abuse

Causing physical injury.

A soccer coach notices that Eric is having trouble walking and running. When the coach asks Eric what's wrong, he says that he accidentally fell down. The coach looks closer and sees strap-shaped welts and bruises on Eric's legs in various stages of healing.

How do you feel about what happened to Eric?

Sexual Abuse

Sexually abusing or exploiting an underage child.

Jimmy's first-grade classmates have complained to the teacher that he showed them his "privates" and tried to pull down their pants when they refused to show him their "privates."

What do you think happened to Jimmy? Would you want your child in a classroom with Jimmy?

Emotional Abuse

Psychological, verbal, or mental abuse.

Mark is usually a pretty happy 6-year-old. Lately his babysitter has noticed that he appears withdrawn and is very bossy with the other children. One day, Mark grabbed another child, yelled at him, and shoved him to the floor. Mark asked the babysitter not to call his mother because Joe, his mother's new boyfriend, would get angry and hurt his mother.

It just creeps into every part of your life.

—Belinda, 16

What might be happening in Mark's life?

Additional Activities

Activity B – Nia

Answer the following questions after watching Nia talk about being sexually abused as a child.

At what age was Nia sexually abused?

When did she first tell someone about the abuse?

Who abused her?

Was Nia threatened during the abuse?

Nia says that she wishes she had told sooner, but she says, "I just couldn't." What do you think she means by that?

Is there anything specific that Nia says that makes you stop and think or change your emotions?

Activity C – “Drugs Don’t Hurt” Role Play

Drug Dealer

Brenda, age 17, is a regular customer of yours. Today she approaches you with her 3-year-old child in tow. The child is crying and carrying an empty water bottle. Brenda has no money and she attempts to get you to “loan” her some drugs. You refuse.

Later she comes back with money and you sell her what she wants. You notice that she is pregnant, but you are more concerned about her young child seeing the drug exchange.

Brenda

You are 17 years old, the mother of a 3-year-old, and in the early stages of pregnancy. You are broke, your child is hungry, and you need drugs. You take your child with you while you try to find your dealer. You attempt to get the dealer to “loan” you drugs until you can get some money. You plead but he refuses.

You walk down the street with your child and solicit for sex. You get paid and return to the dealer. He will only sell to you when you leave your child out of sight.

“John”

You are in the neighborhood looking for a prostitute. Brenda approaches you with her child. You object to the child being present and tell her to do something with the child first. You notice that she is pregnant but you don’t care. You pay her for sex.

Child

You toddle around begging your mother, holding your empty water bottle, crying, and whimpering. You say that you are hungry and you are scared. When your mom leaves you somewhere to prostitute herself, you cry.

Ticket Holders

Each ticket holder gets one ticket, which can be used to stop the role play once to ask a “role player” a question related to behavior, feelings, thoughts, or values.
