Glossary of Resiliency Terms

Acute Stress Disorder (ASD): A mental disorder that can occur in the first month following a trauma. The symptoms that define ASD overlap with those for posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD). However, PTSD cannot be diagnosed until symptoms have lasted for 1 month.\(^i\)

“Flight or Fight”: Responses to survive a dangerous situation and requires an adaptation of the organism to meet the danger, thus changing the organism’s internal balance.\(^ii\)

Burnout: A prolonged response to chronic emotional and interpersonal stressors on the job which consists of three components: exhaustion, depersonalization (disengagement or detachment from the world), and diminished feelings of self-efficacy in the workplace. It reflects a form of “energy depletion.”\(^iii\)

Coping (emotion focused): Attempting to reduce the negative emotional responses associated with stress such as embarrassment, fear, anxiety, depression, excitement, and frustration.\(^iv\)

Compassion Fatigue: Reduced capacity or interest in being empathic or “bearing the suffering of clients”… “the natural consequent behaviors and emotions resulting from knowing about a traumatizing event experienced or suffered by a person.”\(^v\)

Crisis Intervention: An assessment method designed to bolster available coping methods or help individuals reestablish coping and problem-solving abilities while helping them to take concrete steps toward managing their feelings and developing an action plan. Crisis intervention can reinforce strengths and protective factors for those who feel overwhelmed by a traumatic event.\(^vi\)

Crisis: Complex physical and emotional reactions to events that are unusual, particularly to events that are potentially dangerous or life threatening, which throw equilibrium off-balance.\(^vii\)

Disorder: A behavioral or psychological syndrome or pattern that reflects an underlying dysfunction, resulting in significant distress or disability (impaired functioning).\(^viii\)

Equilibrium: An emotional state that involves everyday stress, both positive and negative, resulting in a stable, balanced, or unchanging system.\(^ix\)

Optimism: “A generalized expectancy that good, as opposed to bad, outcomes will generally occur when confronted with problems across important life domains.”\(^x\) In general, optimism is a positive attitude that good things will happen independent of what one does.

Posttraumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD): A severe emotional disorder resulting from exposure to a traumatic event that meets several criteria: 1) a history of exposure to a traumatic event; 2) intrusion of symptoms; 3) persistent avoidance of distressing trauma-related stimuli after the event; 4) negative alterations in cognitions and mood that began or worsened after the traumatic event; 5) trauma-related alterations in arousal and reactivity that began or worsened after the traumatic event; 6) duration of symptoms; 7) significant symptom-related distress or functional impairment; and 8) exclusion (the disturbance is not due to medication, substance use, or other).\(^xi\)
Resilience: The power to cope with adversity and adapt to challenges or change. Resilience helps us return to healthy functioning after being in a stressful situation.\textsuperscript{xii}

Secondary traumatic stress (STS): Refers to a set of symptoms that parallel those of posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) or acute stress disorder as defined in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual V of the American Psychiatric Association. STS also has been compared to compassion fatique.\textsuperscript{xiii}

Self-compassion: Being caring and compassionate towards oneself in the face of hardship or perceived inadequacy. Self-compassion is taking a balanced approach to one’s negative experiences so that painful feelings are neither suppressed nor exaggerated.\textsuperscript{xiv}

Stress: The nonspecific response of the body to any demand.\textsuperscript{xv}

Stressor: An agent that produces stress at any time.\textsuperscript{xvi}

Trauma: An emotional response resulting from an event, series of events, or set of circumstances that is experienced by an individual as physically or emotionally harmful or threatening; and that has lasting adverse effects on the individual’s functioning and physical, social, emotional, or spiritual well-being.\textsuperscript{xvii}

Trauma-informed care: An approach to engaging people with histories of trauma that recognizes the presence of trauma symptoms and acknowledges the role that trauma has played in their lives. Trauma-informed care approaches can be implemented in the delivery of a broad range of services including mental health, substance use, housing, vocational or employment support, domestic violence and victim assistance, and peer support. Trauma-informed care seeks to change the paradigm from one that asks, “What’s wrong with you?” to one that asks, “What has happened to you?” \textsuperscript{xviii}

Vicarious trauma: The negative effects of caring about and caring for others; the cumulative transformation in the inner experience of the victim service provider that comes about as a result of empathic engagement with the victim’s traumatic material.\textsuperscript{xix} This may cause a disruption in the victim service provider’s view of self, others, and the world in general.\textsuperscript{xx}
